As parents, we feel that our child is too young to learn about sex education as well as LGBT relationships, and we don't agree with this being taught at such a tender age. However we do agree it is important for primary school children to learn & understand about forming positive relationships with family & friends, and learn how to respect & be kind to one another.

Yes. Review the age that "Sex Education/LGBT relationship", as we don't agree that our Year 2 child should be taught such things, at such a tender age. We feel it would be more appropriate to teach the children these topics in Year 6, before they go into secondary school. However, we do agree that the topic of PSHE is taught to all ages, as it is important for the children to learn about healthy relationships between family & friends.

Yes. It would bring more of a "peace of mind" state to parents, to be sent/shown the exact presentations/PowerPoint or any media that will be used in class, and show parents exactly what our children will be introduced to/shown. Unfortunately due to covid, a parents meeting at the school is at the moment, not really an option. However I think that the teachers could do a "parents evening meeting" type of event on zoom/google classrooms, and any parents who want to be apart of it, then they can log on, talk to teacher directly & listen to what the teachers will be teaching our children, watch any media the teachers will be using, and then the teacher can answer any questions parents may have regarding any given information. It will also give other parents a chance to listen to each others concerns/questions they might have.

Some sort of worksheet to accompany the lessons might be helpful to aid further discussions with children at home, and for them to read through again themselves (depending on the subject matter covered)
